
SLOANE'S HOUSE OF TODAY

Traditional Charm in the Modern Manner

W. & J. SLOANE · NEW YORK · WASHINGTON · SAN FRANCISCO · LOS ANGELES
IN COLLABORATION WITH A GROUP OF SPECIALISTS IN HOME BUILDING

The Entrance Hall and The Card Room

In the interior of Sloane's House of Today, furniture of the early 19th Century is used in conjunction with an essentially modern background. Because of their form and line, pieces of Empire and Biedermeier inspiration have been chosen as best conforming to contemporary severity.

A small octagonal entrance hall in black, white and olive green creates the illusion of space by a large gunmetal mirror covering the entire wall opposite the entrance door. In front of the mirror is a white statue on a pedestal. In the four corners are decorative panels and the walls are covered with black and green onyx paper. Two Mahogany and gold chairs in green leather and a Mahogany Empire console are the only pieces of furniture. The curtains are green taffeta with pearl trimming.

At the right is the reception or card room (in viewing the house, this is seen after the kitchen) with its Empire green and gold wall paper, black tole lamps with white glass shades, and black Regency bridge chairs.

The Gallery

A Gallery 32 feet in length opens from the hall. The dark sage-green walls are a striking background for the white taffeta curtains which are hung showing the brass rod and rings and are trimmed with a Greek key galloon and gold fringe. Between the windows are Empire consoles. On the opposite wall under a mural painting depicting life in the 18th Century is a white Biedermeier sofa in plum taffeta tufted with white tassels. At either end of the sofa is a round Biedermeier table with a black and gold lamp. In the four corners are gardenia trees and adjacent to them are white benches in gold Empire damask. The floor is black and white diamond patterned linoleum.

THE LIVING ROOM with its high vaulted ceiling painted blue and its lemon colored walls provides a striking modern background for the English Regency furniture. At one end is a circular dining bay hung with white painted drapery which can be closed off by blue and white mirror screens. The circular extension table is Mahogany and the chairs black with red kid seats. At the entrance to the bay are Mahogany wine cabinets. At the other end of the room in a recess is a square cut comfortable sofa in white cotton lapin. Over this, a large decorated mirror reflects the dining bay. On each side are Regency bookcases, one containing the radio and sound equipment. Two black and gold Italian Directoire chairs, an octagonal book table with red leather top, a coffee table and a zebra stripe rug complete the grouping.

The Living Room

In the center of the long wall is the black Empire fireplace with white columns and over the fireplace is a large modern painting. The furniture in this group consists of a rosewood Regency chaise longue in fine white corduroy placed at right angles to the fireplace, a white easy chair, two mahogany lyre tables, a small black side chair tufted in red satin and a white lambskin rug. The fourth wall has three French windows opening on the terrace. They are hung with white Venetian blinds and curtains of white and silver damask. The festoons are trimmed with gold fringe and are draped over a black and gold bow and arrow. The Biedermeier table desk is placed out in the room opposite the fireplace and in the other windows are black and gold pedestals holding classic urns.

The Master Bedroom and the Man's Bedroom

THE MASTER'S BEDROOM

The master bedroom is less formal than the guest room and takes its inspiration from the Colonial period. The large bay window with its white candlewick curtains over white striped organdy forms a delightful setting for the Sheraton dressing table. The bed is also of Sheraton design and the spread repeats the candlewick design of the curtains.
